ABSTRACT

Compiled for educators, product developers, researchers, librarians, publishers, consultants, and others interested in the educational field, this directory lists 412 periodicals covering education and related topics such as special education, educational technologies, educational media and materials, early childhood development, rehabilitation services, and vocational training. The directory is not intended to be an exhaustive compilation of educational journals and newsletters, but rather is designed to be a comprehensive listing of the most influential education periodicals as well as those that LINC has found to be consistently useful and informative. Following a brief preface and an introduction to LINC, periodicals are listed in alphabetical order. Each entry includes (where provided by the publisher) the periodical name, publisher address and telephone number, a brief description of the editorial content, subscription information, and contact name. A subject index is also provided. (The directory is available on diskette for Apple and IBM microcmputers.) (Author/KM)

PREFACE

This useful directory lists more than 400 periodicals covering education and related topics such as special education, educational technologies, educational media and materials, early childhood development, rehabilitation services and vocational training. Each entry includes (where provided by the publisher) the periodical name, publisher address and phone number, brief description of the editorial content, subscription information and contact name. All entries are indexed for easy reference.

The directory was compiled for educators, product developers, researchers, librarians, publishers, consultants and others interested in the educational field. It is an excellent resource for identifying publications of interest. Use the listings to:

- Identify important publications to which you or your organization should subscribe
- Select relevant periodicals to consult for a special research project
- Determine the right magazines in which to advertise
- Choose the most appropriate publications to which press releases should be sent
- Select publications to which unsolicited manuscripts could be submitted

We should note that this directory is not intended to be an exhaustive compilation of every journal or newsletter that may include coverage of educational issues. There are literally thousands of such periodicals. It is, instead, a rather comprehensive listing of the most influential publications as well as those that LINC has found to be consistently useful and informative. If we have omitted any educational periodicals that YOU have found useful, we encourage you to tell us about them. We will include them, where appropriate, in the next update of this directory. Correspondence can be mailed to LINC at the address listed on the title page.

Additional copies of this directory may be purchased directly from LINC for $20. This publication is also available in "electronic" form on computer diskette. On the computer disk version (available for $25 in either Apple or IBM/MS-DOS format), users will find a series of electronic (ASCII) files that correspond to the sections of the print document. In addition, the electronic version includes a simple mailing list generator that will automatically print periodical names and addresses onto readily available fanfold data processing labels--a handy feature for those who often send out press releases. For more information about the disk version of this directory, contact LINC.

A word about LINC...

LINC is recognized nationally for providing marketing and information services to the educational community. We are perhaps best known for the marketing assistance we provide to developers of educational products. Among the other services we provide is information clearinghouse management and operation. Of note, we currently operate the Information Center for Special Education Media and Materials for the U.S. Department of Education.

In addition, LINC has been involved in numerous information system design and development projects, and manages several educational information services available through national telecommunications systems. These services include the IBM Special Needs Forum, the Publisher Connection and the Education Forum (all on the CompuServe Information Service) and LINC Up (on the SpecialNet telecommunications network).

We have also established a new electronic publishing division to produce a series of directories and reference guides, such as this one, that are of interest to members of the educational community. Publications are available in both print form and on computer diskette. Readers who would like to know more about other LINC publications, or who have developed a useful information resource and are interested in having it published by LINC, are encouraged to contact us.
